

FieldPulse Research Pack — Voice-of-Customer Slack Export

Day 4 · Research Pack (5 of 6). An export of ~33 messages from FieldPulse's internal `#voice-of-customer` channel, where CS, sales, and support relay what they hear from customers. This is second-hand, unstructured, and contradictory — a mix of Reported (a customer said) and Inferred (an employee's read). Cite by channel + date. Do not treat a colleague's opinion as a customer fact.

Anonymized: employee names replaced with roles; customer/shop identifiers removed. Threading flattened to a running log. Fictional, for training.

- [CS-1] Kicking off the week. Three separate reconcile complaints over the weekend, all from shops over 100 techs. Pattern or coincidence?
- [Support-2] Not coincidence. Reconcile is our #1 ticket driver this month by volume. Mostly "too many steps" and "crashed and I lost it."
- [CS-3] The 90-tech HVAC account (the one with the paper notebook lady) escalated again — app froze mid-reconcile three nights. She's keeping paper "just in case" now. That's a churn tell.
- [Sales-1] Losing a deal partly on this too — prospect demoed the reconcile flow and said "my dispatcher would never finish that."

2025-09-09

- [Support-2] The offline thing keeps coming up. Techs in basements/crawlspaces can't submit, so they hand paper to the dispatcher who retypes at night. That's creating the reconcile pile.
- [CS-1] So reconcile pain is partly downstream of field-capture failure. Worth saying out loud.
- [Eng-liaison] Careful — we don't actually have data on how often submits fail offline. It's plausible but it's anecdote right now.
- [CS-3] Fair. Reported, not measured.

2025-09-10

- [Sales-1] Competitive note: two prospects this week compared us to ServiceTitan and said we're "lighter, faster to start." That's the good version of the story.
- [Sales-1] The bad version: one of them then asked about "completed vs billed" reporting and we don't have it cleanly. They shortlisted ServiceTitan for that.
- [CS-1] The "completed vs billed" gap comes up from owners specifically, not dispatchers. Different persona, same report.

2025-09-11

- [Support-2] New-dispatcher onboarding: another account says new hires stall at the same setup screen. This is the third account this quarter naming the setup flow.
- [CS-3] The 160-tech account trains every new dispatcher by hand because of that screen. She's stopped filing tickets about it — just works around it. (So it's underreported in ticket volume.)

- [Design-liaison] Noting that. Underreported $\neq$ low severity. People stop reporting the things they've given up on.

2025-09-12

- [CS-1] Long thread from the 160-tech account worth capturing. Her real deadline is Wednesday payroll, not the Friday owner report. Jobs not reconciled by Wed don't make the pay/bill cycle.
- [CS-1] Quote: "If this told me Wednesday morning what I find out Friday, I'd get two days back." That's a North-Star-shaped sentence if I ever heard one.
- [Sales-1] +1. Every shop has a version of that cutoff. It's not always Wednesday but there's always a wall.
- [Support-2] So the pain isn't "reconcile is slow" in the abstract — it's "reconcile isn't done before the money cutoff." Sharper.

2025-09-15

- [CS-3] Mid-day re-route complaints from the 75-tech electrical account again. Board lags the reassign so the dispatcher calls to confirm — does it twice.
- [Support-2] Same shape as the notification-latency tickets from the tech app. Might be one underlying sync issue wearing two costumes.
- [Eng-liaison] Might be. Or might be two things. Don't collapse them until we've looked.

2025-09-16

- [Sales-1] Housecall Pro came up in a loss review. Smaller prospect chose them for "set up in minutes, no training." Our onboarding lost us that one.
- [CS-1] Interesting — onboarding costs us at the small end (vs Housecall) and reporting costs us at the large end (vs ServiceTitan). Squeezed in the middle.

2025-09-17

- [Support-2] Dark mode request again. Third this quarter. Low sev, but people keep asking.
- [CS-3] Filing it, not prioritizing it. Please don't let this become the thing we build because it's easy.
- [Design-liaison] Agreed. The easy-but-irrelevant trap.

2025-09-18

- [CS-1] Accounting-integration requests keep trickling in. Owners want to stop re-entering invoices.
- [Sales-1] It's a retention ask more than an acquisition ask — nobody's picked us because of it, but a couple renewed partly hoping for it.
- [Eng-liaison] Big lift though. Let's not promise it in a deck.

2025-09-19

- [CS-3] Wrapping the week: if I had to name the one thing, it's close-out. Every persona touches it — dispatcher (too slow), owner (revenue leaks), tech (can't submit from the field). Different words, same wound.
 - [Support-2] Second that. Reconcile/close-out is the throughline.
 - [CS-1] Counter-take, gently: is close-out the problem, or is close-out the symptom of the field-capture and sync problems upstream? Genuinely unsure. Flagging for whoever picks this up.
 - [Design-liaison] That's exactly the question a strategy brief should answer instead of assume. 🍌

Reading note

The channel doesn't agree with itself — is close-out the root problem or a downstream symptom? Is the sync/latency issue one bug or two? Is onboarding low-severity because tickets are low, or underreported because people gave up? Those unresolved tensions are yours to synthesize, not the AI's to paper over.
